A scholar of repute visited me and told me to remember three things Learn, Unlearn and Relearn. At first stance, I felt uneasyness grasping the terms. But, as I dived in deep, I found the hidden pearls.

This set of three words, comprises the ultimate philosophy of the country. We should learn everyday and we do so. Without learning new things, we can not apply them. And, a country full of aspirations like India, has to learn an umpteen number of things to establish itself in the category of Developed nation and we could not receive the results. So, we have to unlearn the wrong notions. We have to washout the wrong steps. Afterwards then comes the relearn, Relearning the right path to sustained development, to common welfare and to assured to the citizens.

Thus, this set of three scholarly pearls are much to say but the beauty lies in the application not in saying. This way, we Indians need more work, more devotion and more cooperation and less regional disparities, less gestation periods and less corruption.
